

Project Overview

DogPit is a concept project exploring how a modern fintech landing page can merge brand identity, UI design, and a mascot-driven narrative into a clear, trustworthy, and conversion-oriented experience.

Project goals

- Design a responsive landing page that clearly communicates the app's value and guides users toward creating an account
- Build a cohesive visual identity through consistent branding, UI patterns, and layout structure
- Focus on conversion by ensuring clarity, hierarchy, and an intuitive comparison of available plans

User Flow

The flow prioritizes account creation, while the Plans section offers an optional shortcut for users who want to subscribe immediately. Paid plans are suggested but never mandatory.

Persistent navbar: Log in / Sign up always available.

Plan Cards: quick access for users ready to choose a paid plan.

Design Decisions — Concept & Narrative

DogPit's concept draws from how dogs hide what they value most. The brand centers on a safe "pit" where cards and accounts stay protected, with the mascot defining the core of its visual identity.

I explored different visual directions to balance playfulness, trust, and fintech clarity. In early brainstorming, I also considered antagonists like a mischievous raccoon to inspire narrative ideas around security and fraud protection.

Design Decisions — Visual Storytelling

Dogo, the dog mascot, represents loyalty, protection, and reliability.

The “down the pit” metaphor shapes the entire page: from the hero, the user scrolls downward into the pit where the cards are safely stored.

Dogo reappears just before the pricing cards section as a closing element, to maintain narrative continuity and reinforce a sense of presence and trust throughout the experience.

Design Decisions — UI language

- Canine Blue:
trust, security, financial stability
- Canine Yellow:
provides energy, high contrast and a youthful feel
- Structure and reliability:
squared geometry reinforces clarity and order
- Rounded corners:
softened edges keep the interface friendly and aligned with Dogo's approachable personality

Wireframe (lo-fi)

Early low-fidelity wireframes defined the basic layout and visual hierarchy.

Final Mockups

Final mockups deliver a polished, clear and responsive interface with a defined identity.
